

Asking it a question, and keeping it stocked

Ask the knowledge base
Answers come only from documents your role can see, and every claim is linked to the passage it came from.

1 How long does a customer have to raise a chargeback? Ask

2 High confidence 87% · 2 sources cited · 2380 ms

3 A service dispute must be raised within 45 days of the transaction date [1]. Fraud claims run to a longer 120-day window and are owned by Fraud Ops rather than Disputes [2].

4 CITED SOURCES

[1] Chargeback Handling Policy v4 · 3. Chargebacks > 3.2 Timelines · p.11 91% match
A chargeback must be raised within 45 days of the transaction date. Late claims are rejected automatically by the scheme.

[2] Chargeback Handling Policy v4 · 3. Chargebacks > 3.4 Fraud claims · p.14 84% match
Fraud | 120 days | Fraud Ops. Service | 45 days | Disputes.

5 ALSO RETRIEVED, NOT CITED

[3] Chargeback Handling Policy v4 · 3. Chargebacks > 3.3 Evidence · p.12 62% match
Attach the signed dispute form and the statement extract.

WHY YOU CAN TRUST THE ANSWER

Retrieval is filtered by your role before the model sees anything, so it cannot quote a document you could not open yourself. Every citation is checked against what was actually retrieved — an invented one is removed along with the sentence it supported.

WHEN IT HAS NOTHING

It says so and stops, rather than guessing. That is the correct answer, not a failure.
